She gave a brief introduction of herself and educated us about the process of applying for admissions, the benefits and drawbacks of pursuing further education in the US, employment opportunities, and the need for skilled engineers at the start of the event.

She provided us with advice on how to develop our skill set and greatly inspired us. She also discussed how difficult it is to obtain master's degree in US.

The Q&A session then started, and it was quite interactive since many students who had questions asked them and got their questions answered. She advised us to be serious about the projects and examinations we take, and she also talked about how picking a subject and university may be difficult because different universities have different approaches.

The speaker even informed the students of scholarship opportunities, part-time employment, the value of a master's thesis in advancing one's career, and other topics.

PICTURES OF THE EVENT–

CONCLUSION –

Students learned about MS options in the US as well as job opportunities in the hardware industry. Overall, the students learned a lot from this experience, and the session was quite engaging, allowing for the spread of knowledge about a variety of different issues.
